

Q.1 Read the given passage and answer the four questions that follow:

Ashlyn Greer was on the hunt. This time in the messy back room of a vintage boutique two blocks from An Unlikely Story, the rare bookstore she'd owned and operated for nearly four years. She'd received a call from Kevin Petri, the boutique's owner, about a man from Rye who brought in several cartons of books, one of which contained hardbacks, recent bestsellers by Steel, Chamberlain, and Garret—esteemed authors, but hardly rare. The second carton offered a more eclectic mix, including several health and nutrition books, one guaranteeing a flat tummy in thirty days, another touting the benefits of a macrobiotic diet.

She worked quickly, careful not to hold on to any books for too long, but it was hard not to pick up subtle vibrations as she returned them to the carton. They had belonged to someone who was sick, afraid, and worried about running out of time. It was a gift Ashlyn had since she was twelve, like a perfumer's nose—the ability to sense the echoes attached to certain inanimate objects, especially books. She didn't know how it worked. After a fight between her parents, she had pedaled to the cramped bookshop, her safe place. The owner, Frank, greeted her with a taciturn nod. He knew about her troubled home life but never mentioned it, offering her a quiet refuge instead. It was kindness she'd never forgotten. It was there she first experienced the strange sensation of shock and sadness, when she picked up The Water-Babies.

What did Ashlyn sense about the person who previously owned the books in the second carton?

1. The person was excited about new diets.
2. The person was a collector of rare books.
3. The person was ailing, aghast, and worried about elapsing time.
4. The person was indifferent towards his possessions.

Q.5 Read the passage and answer the four questions that follow:-

The brain operates in different states, measured in five main categories of brain waves; alpha, beta, gamma, theta and delta. Most of the time, our brains are in a default 'work' state, characterized by beta and gamma waves. This is when we're using our brains to solve problems and focus on tasks which require us to stay in an alert, active state. This is an essential role, for sure, but not one you want to stay in for too long, as it raises cortisol levels in the body, increasing feelings of stress and anxiety."

Stress, and the effects it has on the body, is one of the main drivers of chronic disease and depression today," says Dr.Vuu. A study published in Future Sciences found that stress caused physiological changes in the brain, increasing the risk of everything from mood disorders to autoimmune disease and dementia.

A 2021 meta-analysis of multiple studies found that engaging in leisure activities can improve health by protecting against coronary heart disease, cognitive decline and dementia. Hobbies not only improve our neuro plasticity but also make us happier.

In all, hobbies are a powerful antidote to stress, causing a cascade of positive changes. "Doing a hobby you enjoy puts your brain into a 'flow' state, characterized by alpha and theta waves, which cause you to feel relaxed, less stressed and less anxious," Dr. Vuu says. These brain states are characterized by feelings of deep relaxation, passive focus, creativity, intuition and daydreaming.

Q.9 Read the given passage and answer the four questions that follow:-

Till recently, many scholars have worked on collections of folk songs, but their main attention was on their lyrical content. The musical aspect just did not receive so much attention. Hence, the subject remained a closed book. When I ventured to study the subject, I faced the stark fact that the only source available to me was the rustic folk themselves. The difficulties for such a primary worker in any field are very well-known. But the co-operation I had from the simple men and women of the villages made me forget everything. With the deepest love and gratitude to the village folks, I present to you some fragments of my collection and humble observations on them.

Now, who are these folks? I would say that they are the "civilized" people of the villages. They are a group in whom the economic, educational and cultural diversity of the city is much less pronounced. Their modes of life, customs, lore and songs are known and shared by one and all in the group. Their art, particularly their music, is the expression of their thoughts, feelings, hopes and aspirations. Their music is simple, natural and free from any kind of artificial sophistication or inhibition, which is an unavoidable feature of any urban society.

Tamilnad abounds in the beauties of nature in all its vicissitudes, hills and dales, plains and pasturage. Its magnificent temples have fostered arts like architecture, sculpture, music, dance, painting and literature. It is of interest to note that folk arts, culture and tradition had a great part to play in the
